ABSTRACT

This guide is designed to call attention to and make more accessible the collection of materials in the University of Arizona Library on Mexican American history, culture, and social and economic development. It contains current materials although some older works may be included due to their comprehensiveness. Each of the 15 subject sections--general works, the arts, economics, education, folklore, health, history, labor and laboring classes, language, literature, politics and government, psychology, religion, sociology, and sports--is divided into: subject headings related to the specific topic; bibliographies; encyclopedias and dictionaries; indexes and abstracts for journal articles and books; directories of persons and organizations; a selected list of journals; and a list of pertinent University of Arizona Theses. An index containing topics and phrases, as well as index terms, provides cross references to the subject sections of this guide. (MER)

The Spanish tradition permeates the lifestyle and literature of the Southwest. Aware of the importance of this tradition to our community, the University of Arizona Library has collected, through the years, a large number of materials on the history, culture, and social and economic development of the Mexican American. More recently, an effort has been made to collect current Chicano literature.

As the body of materials increases in volume and is scattered throughout the library, it becomes even more difficult for the user to locate it. This Guide is designed to call attention to our collection and to make it more accessible to students doing research in Mexican-American studies.

The Guide does not attempt to cover materials related to the Hispanic culture per se; emphasis is on the Mexican American, his sociological, political and cultural milieu. Although it is certainly important to Mexican-American heritage, Mexican history, anthropology and archaeology are not covered in the Guide, as these subjects are well indexed in other bibliographic sources. For the most part, current materials were selected unless older materials were judged more comprehensive, and only those journals were included which contain a significant number of articles relating to the concerns of Mexican Americans. The Guide is neither exhaustive nor definitive, and will be periodically updated; comments and suggestions from those who use it are welcome.

Further assistance is available at the Central Reference desk in the Main Library

PURPOSE AND USE OF THIS GUIDE

Locating materials on a Chicano subject can sometimes be difficult. Some information is in the obvious Chicano materials which are usually in demand and may not be on the shelf when you need them. Some information comes out in general publications which are covered by the general indexes. Other information comes out in more specialized publications such as the professional journals of education, history, sociology, etc. which are covered by the more specialized indexes of those fields. Still more information may be found in government documents, or the highly useful ERIC file, or newspapers which are covered by a different index.

This Guide is designed to let you know about the many useful reference works available and the relevant index terms to help you get the information you want, whether it is in books, journal articles, newspaper reports, theses, government documents, or microforms.

This is a "working guide," rather than a general bibliography. If you carefully follow the steps listed in the SAMPLE SEARCH section described below, you should be able to develop a list of materials that will be related to your own particular topic.

DESCRIPTION OF GENERAL SECTION:

The GENERAL SECTION lists all works that are important to consult for any topic. Works that cover materials for more than three different subjects are only listed in the GENERAL SECTION and are not repeated in the relevant subject sections.

Always use materials listed in the GENERAL SECTION, in addition to those in the SUBJECT SECTION when doing a complete search for materials.

DESCRIPTION OF SUBJECT SECTIONS:

The Guide contains 15 SUBJECT SECTIONS (see Table of Contents). Most SUBJECT SECTIONS include the following information:

1. The Subject Headings which are related to that topic and which are used to identify books listed in the Subject Card Catalog, in Central Reference.

2. The Bibliographies or published lists of books and articles on the subject.

3. The Encyclopedias and Dictionaries available for authoritative background information on the subject.

4. The Indexes and Abstracts which will lead to journal articles and books on each subject.

5. The Directories which will provide information on persons and organizations important to the subject.

6. A selected list of Journals that stress Chicano concerns as they relate to that subject.

7. A list of University of Arizona Theses pertaining to that q subject.

It is our purpose to list helpful reference works needed for comprehensive research. A "reference" work will refer you to the sources that contain the information: books, journal articles, etc. However, some sources will be more useful to you than others, depending on the specific topic you are researching. Again, be sure to look at the GENERAL SECTION, as well as the SUBJECT SECTION relevant to your topic. The librarians at the Reference Desk can suggest the most useful approach for your particular purpose. There may also be some pamphlet material on your topic which they can help you find.

Some of the sources listed are exclusively concerned with Chicano Studies; others are standard sources that can lead you to such studies in more general works.

SAMPLE SEARCH:

A sample search method using this Guide to conduct a comprehensive search might be as follows:

1. Look up your topic in the subject index at the end of this Guide and turn to the SUBJECT SECTION referred to.

2. If there is an Encyclopedia for that general subject, look in it under your specific topic for background information. Make note of any books or articles mentioned in the bibliography at the end of the article. In this section, also make note of Dictionaries available for definitions of terms associated with your topic.

3. Consult the Bibliographies mentioned to begin compiling a list of books published on your topic. [Bibliographies in the GENERAL SECTION will also be helpful.]

4. From the Subject Heading list, choose those that are appropriate to your topic and look in the Main Subject Card Catalog under those headings for relevant books. [Subject Headings in the GENERAL SECTION are important to all subjects.]

5. Look up your subject in the Indexes and Abstracts listed, to find journal articles of interest. Indexes will list the author and title of the article, the journal in which it appeared, and the specific volume, issue number, and date. Abstracts will summarize the contents of the article for you.

6. Note the Journals listed in your Subject Section. Many Chicano journals are not indexed regularly and it may be helpful for you to examine the titles mentioned as important for your subject area.

7. Use Directories to locate biographical information or to identify organizations or individuals you may wish to contact for first-hand information.

As you use the sources mentioned above, you will find that books and journal articles as well as encyclopedias will contain their own bibliographies or lists of books on your topic. Remember to look for these and add them to your list, then look them up on the Author-Title Card Catalog in Central Reference.

ASK THE LIBRARIAN:

The SAMPLE SEARCH is only an outline. You should always consult with librarians about your specific topic. The Search outlined is a very comprehensive one that you might follow to develop a research paper.

If you need only brief information on a topic, the librarian can help you choose the best source in which to quickly find it.

In order to make the best use of this Guide you should be familiar with the location of materials and services in the Library. The booklet The University of Arizona Libraries or Las Bibliotecas de la Universidad de Arizona is available in the lobby of the Main Library. A library tour may also be helpful.

La tradición hispana está firmemente arraigada en la cultura y el modo de vida del Sudoeste. Consciente de la importancia de esta tradición la biblioteca de la Universidad de Arizona ha formado a través de los años una importante colección de libros sobre la historia, la cultura, y el desarrollo social y económico de los méxico-americanos. Recientemente se ha hecho un esfuerzo por coleccionar también la literatura chicana de los últimos tiempos.

A medida que el número de libros aumenta y estos se dispersan por las diferentes secciones de la biblioteca, se hace más difícil para el lector encontrar lo que necesita. Esta guía tiene el propósito de llamar la atención sobre nuestra colección y hacerla más accesible a los estudiantes e investigadores interesados en estudios chicanos.

Esta guía no pretende abarcar todos los materiales relacionados con la cultura hispánica propiamente dicha; más bien intenta poner de relieve el medio social, cultural y político del méxico-americano. Si bien la historia de México, la antropología y arqueología son parte importantísima en el patrimonio cultural de la Raza, estas disciplinas no estan incluídas en la guía por estar extensamente indizadas en otras fuentes bibliográficas. En su mayoría los materiales seleccionados son de actualidad, salvo en los casos en que materiales antiguos resultaran más completos y sólo aquellas revistas que contienen un número importante de artículos relacionados con los intereses méxico-americanos fueron incluídas. La guía no pretende ser exhaustiva ni definitiva sino que será puesta al día periodicamente; los comentarios y sugerencias de las personas que la usen serán agradecidos.

Para cualquier pregunta no vacile en acudir a los bibliotecarios en la sección Referencia Central que están allí para servirle.
